Dear Mrs Secretary, FCC

FCC Mail Room

I understand there will be a review of the 1973 ruling regarding barring cable and satellite broadcasters from airing games locally if they are sold out 72 hours before kickoff.

Being a long-time Bills fan (I'm 73), I look forward to watching my home team on TV, since I can't afford to attend the games in person. Since our stadium holds 73,000, our sellouts are more difficult compared to smaller stadiums. To be fair to all NFL cities, the new rule should have a consistent percentage for all to base ~~the~~ their sellout numbers; say 80% (or whatever) multiplied by their full capacity would equal what the sellout for each stadium would be. Seems more fair to me than the current rule.

Hopefully consideration for all fans would be your primary goal.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Good luck!
